- The attached sketch represents the silhouette of the Arkona cliff on the Island of Ruegen at a distance of three nautical miles to seaward. The objects indicated are as follows:
 - The tower marked 1 is a beacon. This is probably the beacon which was erected before the war, but there is a possibility that it may be a new construction.
 - b. The grilled tower marked 2 is a new construction reported to have been erected during the summer of 1951. The tower is probably of metal and is thought to be a radio station rather than an observation tower, which is usually made of wood. If necessary, the Arkona Lighthouse can be used as an observation tower, which is another reason why the metal tower is believed designed for another purpose. i.e., as a radio tower.
- During the summer of 1951, it was reported that the Seepolizei had established radio stations in the Arkona area, but whether or not the Seepolizei operates the presumed radio station mentioned above is not known.
- Except for addition of the above-mentioned structures, the silhouette of the 3. Arkona cliff does not appear to have undergone any appreciable change since the summer of 1950.
